"As I look back at life, it is nothing but power of the mind that matters the most. Scaling Mount Everest and setting up ISIC have taught me a powerful truth: Life is all about conquering the other summit - The Summit of the Mind"

As India celebrates the Golden Jubilee of the first Indian ascent of Mount Everest, the country is looking back at the historic moment when two Indians, Nirmal Purja and Sanku Dutt, reached the summit of the world's highest peak.

Conquering the unforgiving heights of Mount Everest

The first Indian ascent of Mount Everest was a historic moment for the country. It was the first time that two Indians had reached the summit of the world's highest peak. The ascent was led by Nirmal Purja and Sanku Dutt, who reached the summit on May 21, 2013.

The ascent was a feat of endurance and courage. The two climbers faced many challenges, including high altitude, low oxygen, and harsh weather conditions. They spent several weeks preparing for the climb and training at high altitudes.
